

Dayton, Ohio, October 26, 1908.

Dear Bro. Howe:

I received this afternoon your card telling of the telegram, announcing the death of Sister Minnie Linker. It is very sad news indeed, for the sake of her bereft husband and the bereft Church in the heart of which she still lives, ^{also above all} and, for her own sake, whose wifely position is abruptly terminated and whose career of Christian usefulness ^{is} so sadly cut short.

If Bro. Linker can remain at his post and the Wilberforces arrive safely, I think Danville can be manned without any severe break. Temporarily, Becker can be used. We may need to use both Christopher and his wife, right at Danville. That is about the best that at present comes to my mind.

"Jehovah will provide."

Yours in sympathy,
Milton Wright.
